The Historian: Town Clerk Sarah Kimrey

Growing up in Orange County, Sarah Kimrey never dreamed of being a town clerk, but she did know that she loved history.

As Hillsborough's clerk, Kimrey is the gatekeeper of the town's records and minutes, which date to February 1843. The oldest minutes are handwritten on large pieces of paper and bound together in binders that are kept in a fireproof cabinet just a few steps away from her desk.

By state law, each city, town and county is required to have a clerk. Appointed by the town manager, the town clerk functions as the town's historian. This is ideal for Kimrey, who is introverted and enjoys working independently to uncover requested information.

"I like the research that goes into some of my work — having to read through statutes and trying to interpret that information," Kimrey said. "I like reading through past minutes to see how things were handled."

Kimrey has worked almost two decades for the town. She feels this role is the best fit for her.

In her clerk role, Kimrey facilitates public board meetings, prepares agenda packets and ensures board procedures follow state law.

Kimrey also serves as a human resources technician. She enjoys collaborating with different departments and people in both her roles, helping answer questions not only from the public but also from town employees.

"Everybody has an opinion; everybody has things they are passionate about," Kimrey said. "I think it's great when they are passionate about local government, so get involved."

Mayor: Find Your Village

Mayor Mark Bell focused on the impact of community groups in his April 22 address.

"The village of Hillsborough has grown," the mayor said. "I feel that we are a village of villages, connected to each other with different things to contribute."

Bell urged residents to get involved: "My challenge to you is to find your village — or two or three."

A Q&A with the Town Manager

Town Manager Eric Peterson

The town manager is the linchpin of the council-manager form of government, connecting elected officials to the town's staff.

What does a day in the life of a town manager look like?

The one constant is that my day rarely works out as scheduled. We're in a growing community with a lot of old infrastructure, so there is never a shortage of unexpected issues that come up.

What do you find most enjoyable about being a town manager?

I enjoy seeing other people succeed. I'm regularly in awe of the amazing things our town employees accomplish.

What do you find to be most challenging?

There are so many tough issues in local government. As hard as we try to find win-win solutions, it can't always be done. We must pivot to find the least bad option. Being the bearer of bad news is not fun but an important part of the job.
